Hi Steve

I hope you are well too.

You are right, thymosin B4 is prohibited under S2.5

I hope you have been well.

Can I please ask WADA's advice on the prohibited status of Thymosin B4. From what I have read it is a protein which promotes endothelial cell migration and angiogenesis.

Can you confirm if protein is classified as a prohibited under S2.5 due to its ability for vascularisation and regenerative capacity?

Date: Wed, 04 Jul 2012 06:25:43 +1000

Hi Stephen

The List Committee discussed thymosin beta 4 about a year ago and considered it prohibited under S2.5. However it is not clear what kind of thymosin thymomodulin is. For example thymosin alpha is an immunomodulator and unrelated to thymosin beta 4. Nevertheless it is also not clear if thymomodulin has been approved in any country for human use; if not it could fall in S0. Do you have any further information on this substance, e.g. type of thymosin, approval for human use, if it's being used by athletes, seized by customs?

Thank you

Thank you for your reply. My point is that the pharmacokinetics in athletes, given a number of factors, is different to the average population. Once we had established these differences in time course for a number of analgesic and anti-inflammatory therapeutics, commonly employed and well-documented in the average population, then a better understanding maybe applied to other substances, a lot less established in their metabolism within the athletes. I will continue to evolve the collaboration with the Australian Jockey Club Laboratory and it will be interesting to identify the differences and efficacy of various substances in view of these biopharmakinetik differences.

Hi [REDACTED]
Thank you for this information. Your offer was discussed and most of the drugs mentioned are not prohibited while for the other the metabolisms are established. So we do not believe that this kind of collaboration will be WADA's highest priority. Nevertheless if you wish you can send us the report for our information.

Hi [REDACTED]
I am just saying hello again from Australia. I have been in discussion a fair bit with [REDACTED] from the Australian Jockey Club Analytical Laboratory in Sydney. He sent a copy of the recently released "Pharmacokinetics of Equine Medications" report which was an in depth analysis of the top 12 therapeutic interventions commonly employed in the horse treatment area. This investigation was done under the heading of Equine Therapeutics Research Australia. I can forward a copy of the report to you. I think a similar study would of great interest in the human domain. The groups included the Non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs Phenylbutazone, Flunixin IV and Ketoprofen IV; corticosteroids Hydrocortisone IV, Prednisolone oral and Methylprednisolone IM; sedatives Acepromazine IV and Detomidine IV; the Antispasmodic Buscopan IV; and the local anaesthetics Mepivacaine SC, Lignocaine SC and Prilocaine SC. At the University of Sydney I am in the process of establishing a pharmacokinetics laboratory. There may be some good synergy between the laboratory and WADA in terms of the pharmacokinetic properties of the pain medications in exercise and I am also in the process of establishing some collaboration as well. I had been trying to ring you but it must be very busy your end because it has been difficult to get through with the main line indicating excessive waiting times for the last couple of weeks. I had been ringing your direct number but I had no luck there either. I think that the report was a thorough time course evaluation of these substances. Interesting, with the advent of stem cells and placental cell extract, I guess there will be less reliance on some medications which is a good thing. And the advent of stem cells and placental cell extract do illustrate an exciting era in tissue repair which may be efficacious and are certainly safe. So if you would like a copy of the report I can certainly forward it to you. And I am hoping that there may be some interest on your part for further discussion on a similar human analysis.

Dear Tony

We received a query from _____ journalist with the Melbourne Age and Sydney Morning Herald newspapers. He was asked to contact us from your office.

I consulted my colleagues in Science, and _____ tells me that there was an email sent on a similar (or same) substance last July to S.Watts. Please see attached.

Today, the difficulty in responding specifically on thymomodulin is that we have not had scientific information on it.

In these instances, we typically return the question to the country anti-doping agency for further information as it could be a country-specific composition.

I would prefer avoiding playing ping pong with this request and see with you how this query can be best answered.

Good afternoon, my name is _____ I'm a reporter with the Melbourne Age and Sydney Morning Herald newspapers. The Australian Sports Anti Doping Authority has asked me to put the following enquiry to WADA. My enquiry is what was WADA's position on the use of a substance called thymomodulin by professional athletes from 2011 onwards? If there are any restrictions on its use, can you please advise from when they applied?
